2. Invited Guest – Ms Kate Haire
Senior HSE Policy Advisor, Small Business Trade Association Forum, HSE

HH welcomed Ms Kate Haire (KH) and thanked her for coming to speak to the POOSH Group. He added that KH’s attendance came out of a wish for POOSH to try and engage with small businesses and offer information and guidance as appropriate.

KH stated that she was the policy adviser to the Small Business Trade Association Forum, and part of the Strategic Interventions Division. HSE has identified that SMEs struggle with the volume and complexity of regulations and identifying health and safety issues relevant to their business; 50% do not seek advice on health and safety, and 40% seek advice online. SMEs are more prone to accidents and needed help getting started with basic health and safety management. It was noted that many are regulated by Local Authorities.

Based on the annual business survey in 2010, the top three sources of advice for small businesses were:

1. Accountant
2. Consultant
3. Business link local services

HSE then focussed on how they could help SMEs and decided to simplify guidance in the form of Health and Safety Made Simple, provide a health and safety toolbox and signpost SMEs to OSHCR. The crucial factor was to highlight to businesses what they did, and did not need to do, in simple language, low risk businesses could simply follow the guidance provided. The front end of the HSE website has been changed to reflect this approach. The main purpose of this change was to educate the user. The presentation of topic specific information was still in progress.

HSE had identified 1000 items of guidance, this was being reduced to 600. KH highlighted one particular initiative, the Ladder Exchange, which was set up in 2007 following the HSE and Local Authority Height Aware campaign. Since then over 10,000 unsafe ladders had been removed from Britain’s workplaces. The Ladder Association and partners will run this initiative from 2012.

KH informed the group of the ways that HSE engaged with SMEs and these included contact with:

- Small Business Trade Association Forum
- Estates Excellence (industrial estates)
- Safety and Health awareness days
- Local Enterprise partnerships
- Social media (circulation of e-bulletins have increased the numbers of subscribers by thousands, but it was still very difficult to reach those not subscribing)
- Awareness Days (mainly agricultural)
- Stakeholder networks

KH stressed that consistency of message was crucial, together with sharing knowledge and experience. Myth busting (through Challenge Panels) was vital is making it clear what was and was not a health and safety issue.

Group discussion followed and the following points made:

JH raised the matter of fee for intervention (FFI) and the perception that if HSE visited a business it would cost, KH responded that this would only be the case where a material breach was identified. This message needed to be put over to small businesses. DK added that Local Authorities did not charge for their advice.
KH stated that the Interdepartmental Business Register (IDBR) had identified there were 4 million businesses registered and of those about 60% were considered to be low risk workplaces. In response to CW KH reported that revised guidance for charities and the voluntary sector had been prepared. AMcF asked whether non verbal guidance e.g. cartoons was included, KH replied that it was.

Consideration was given to how you get someone to change their behaviour and it was felt that highlighting employee responsibilities would be a key factor.

DK asked how the Challenge Panels were dealing with consistency of message and KH responded that many cases had been put to the Myth Buster Panel and they were working well to clarify what is, and is not, a health and safety issue.

HH asked what POOSH could do and KH responded that it was down to consistency of message, circulating information to businesses and if POOSH held events the HSE would be happy to supply information for distribution.

SB added that the HSE website could signpost the RoSPA (Roger Bibbings) initiative reported in their report, RB was to promote this at the next Forum meeting. In addition she asked about involving banks in this process. KH replied that that avenue was currently being pursued, however there were potential commercial conflicts.

RoSPA were bidding for funds for a small business H&S campaign and were also raising the issue of the ‘fifth employee’, seen as the trigger for H&S legislation.

A suggestion from CW was to position leaflets with companies like B&Q and Wickes at their trade counters.

DK asked if the HSE view was that low-risk companies did not need a consultant and KH confirmed that was the case. DK was not happy with that line and cited the case of a shop with a spa and the potential for legionella which may not be identified without professional expertise.

KH stated that the HSE measures for success are the number of web hits, stakeholder links to the HSE website and awareness.

The membership of the Small Business Trade Association Forum includes representatives of:

- EEF
- FSB
- CBI
- IoD
- Glaziers
- Builders
- Printers
- Lift and escalator companies
- Steel workers
- Construction

A paper on “Life long learning for H&S risk management for IIG Institution members version 3” had been circulated to the Group for information and any comments to be given to John Brazendale by 18 October 2012.

CW commented that the document was completely within the health and safety area and did not extend to cover wider aspects. It was suggested that the date of the document should be amended as it currently says 2008.

It was agreed that AM would contact Professor Dick Taylor and obtain copies of the IIG meeting minutes for circulation to the POOSH Group.

Action: AM

HH informed the meeting that the Business Case group needed good examples of good practice showing business benefits. SB stated that the IES report on the Olympics showed good business impact.

9. Consultants’ Register - update

KH stated there were currently 2199 consultants on the register. 600 consultants had not renewed their registration. An exit survey had been carried out and the main reasons for not renewing were because they were no longer consultants or they were not getting business through OSHCR. It was noted that members of the British Psychological Society (BPS) would be able to join the register from the end of October 2012. The annual fee to be on the register is £60.

KH added that the search feature on the register will be randomised from January 2013 and therefore will not be purely alphabetical.

It was noted that marketing in the trade press and forthcoming events would be taking place in 2013.

A complaints procedure was to be introduced in 2013.

DK asked whether insurance companies could recommend OSHCR members, KH responded that it was referred to in BIA guidance.

KH reported that good progress was being made on the delivery of the Lofstedt recommendations.
Over 400 responses to the ACOPs consultation had now been received and analysis was underway. The proposed length limit of the ACOPs (32 pages) was still under review. JH stressed that ACOPs guidance for small businesses was crucial and must be clear and concise.
